CARIBBEAN DESTINATIONS

Cat Island,
The Bahamas

Located over 300 miles from Miami, this island is southeast of Eleuthera and northeast of Long Island. Cat is approximately 48 miles long and averages between one to four miles in width. Rolling hills, dense woodlands and isolated beaches cover Cat Island's 150 square miles. The island impresses visitors in a way only natural vast emptiness can. The story behind Cat Island stretches across the Atlantic Ocean and the island claims to be original landing site of Christopher Columbus in the New World. Rumor has it that Cat Island was named after the pirate Arthur Catt, who was known to frequent the area. For more than four centuries Cat Island was known as San Salvador but in 1926 Watlings Island (also named after a pirate) was re-designated San Salvador and the moniker Cat Island was used once again. Cat Island should not be confused with its very small cousin Cat Cay which is part of the Biminis. Cat's distinct virtue is that it's home to the highest point in the Bahamas—Mount Alvernia—an awesome 206 feet (63 meters) above sea level. On its peak is a monastery known as The Hermitage. Cat Island happens to be the Bahamas' sixth largest island and, like all the other islands of the Bahamas, it's surrounded by gorgeous secluded beaches.
